Workshop Series

Planetary Practices

“The most inspiring aspect of the workshop series is witnessing people bring their skills, interests, and care into a shared space. It becomes a place where we experiment and learn together about sustainability, wellbeing, and the futures we want to create.”

The Campus Sustainability Team annually awards the Campus Sustainability Champion title to a distinguished person, entity, or action. The entire Aalto community can propose nominees for the award, and this year's special theme was recycling.

The 2025 Sustainability Champion was awarded to the Planetary Practices Workshops series. The rationale was the workshops' ability to provide tangible hope and the opportunity for everyone to contribute to a more sustainable future. The workshops were initiated through an open call inviting students from various backgrounds and fields of study to propose a skill or topic they were excited to share. Whether it was repairing electronics or clothing, preparing a vegan meal from leftovers, or

#1 Repairing Electronics

The most important step in repairing electronics is researching and understanding the issue. Every device is different, and so is every repair. With some promising information and the confidence to open the device, problems can be solved one by one.

#2 Fluid art upcycling

Fluid art offers a fun and simple way to give objects a new life by pouring color over them and transforming them into something unique.

#3 Fiber out of Nettle

Working with nettle shows how incredible nature is. By cracking open the stem with a stone, you find fibers that can be twisted into a surprisingly strong string.

#4 Hope Zines

The concept of hope labour highlights how creative work is often done with the hope of future value, and zines provide a powerful medium for reflecting on this idea in a personal and expressive way.

#5 Pizza making and rescue food

Making Italian pizza dough from scratch and using rescued ingredients, like potatoes, shows how traditional cooking can align with reducing food waste.

#6 Midnight Aurora Well-being

Wellbeing in a team context depends on clearly communicating personal needs and boundaries, creating space for healthier collaboration.

#7 Collective reflection on well-being

Through art and playful exercises, it becomes easier to reflect on our own experiences of wellbeing, responsibility, and participation, and to consider how we can better support ourselves and others.

#8 Reclaiming agency through anger

Anger is often seen as something “not allowed,” but it actually carries a lot of energy that can be used for change. Letting anger be there, feeling it, and expressing it can show where our boundaries are, what we care about, and what we might want to change.
